Dear Representatives Hensarling, Waters, Pearce and Perlmutter:

We, the undersigned investors representing a more than $855 billion in assets under management, are writing to express our strong support for corporate ownership transparency legislation that contains important provisions necessary for a more transparent business environment that upholds good governance as a standard business practice, which investors rely on and expect.

Such legislation would require companies to disclose information about the real people who own or control them (often called the “beneficial owners”) at the time they are created and kept up to date. Currently, in all 50 states companies can be created anonymously, effectively removing personal responsibility or accountability from the corporate equation. As a result, anonymously-owned American companies have been used by the criminal and corrupt to evade taxes, skirt sanctions and win U.S. government contracts in order to steal taxpayer dollars. They have been used to finance terrorist activities and launder earnings from the trafficking of human beings, drugs and weapons. This legislation would provide law enforcement with critical information to combat these types of criminal activities.

A company’s ability to conduct the necessary due diligence to understand the actors in its supply chains, partners and its own corporate structure is a basic component of its commitment to governance, and goes to the heart of its integrity and ethics. Legitimate business actors depend on a transparent business environment in order to shine, while small- and medium-sized businesses also seek a fairer and more level playing field.

Commercial actors need to know who they are doing business with, including investors who rely on access to reliable and accurate information in order to fulfil their own obligations as responsible business actors. Opaque corporate structures are not just an obstacle for law enforcement, but also inhibit investors' ability to identify risks and constructively engage companies on progress toward more responsible conduct.

Given the complexity of global supply chains and corporate structures, we believe that companies failing to execute corporate governance procedures robustly are exposed to a wide range of risks, which could negatively impact shareholder value. Building on existing governance frameworks, companies should not be burdened by this legislation. This includes small businesses that should be able to identify ownership information, and one's inability to do so raises a serious red flag. In fact, in a 2015 report, Fortune 500 business leaders demonstrated how "the business impetus for beneficial ownership transparency goes beyond compliance, contributing to risk management, and even in some instances, competitive advantages." Some examples include the value of beneficial ownership information to an employer, as well as to identify and manage certain tax risks, and health and safety issues.

Overall secrecy is not conducive to successful investing or business. There is a real cost of corruption to investors, shareholders, small businesses, consumers and the general public, including the creation of a corporate culture that tolerates unethical behavior. Crimes, such as bribery, facilitated by hidden company ownership, can erode democratic institutions, rule of law and human rights protections. Recognizing the importance of this issue, international business leaders have stated that ending anonymous companies will mean more competitive markets, more stable financial systems and more sustainable development.

We encourage you to support robust corporate ownership transparency legislation to help provide law enforcement with the tools needed to fight crime and the criminals that rely on the anonymity of American companies. In the process, you will be helping to protect the millions of investors whose success is predicated upon the existence of transparent and accountable institutions.

Sincerely,
